

Dining Options on Capitol Hill

Need to take a break or grab a bite to eat? Going back and forth between meetings with members of Congress can be exhausting. Fortunately, there are plenty of locations across Capitol Hill for advocates to refuel or rest their feet.

House Office Buildings

Cannon House Office Building – The Cannon Carry Out has sandwiches and hamburgers. Please note that seating is limited.

Longworth House Office Building – The Longworth Cafeteria has a wide range of food, including salads, pizza, sandwiches, and hamburgers.

Rayburn House Office Building – The Rayburn House Cafeteria has a hot and cold salad bar, as well as deli sandwiches and wraps.

Senate Office Buildings

Hart Senate Office Building – The Hart Senate Chef offers deli-style food, including sandwiches. Limited seating is available.

Dirksen/Hart Senate Office Buildings – Located in the corridor connecting the Dirksen and Hart buildings, the Dirksen Cafeteria offers a range of foods.

Russell Senate Office Building – Cups has deli-style sandwiches and salads.

Note: Vending machines are available throughout the House and Senate office buildings.*

Several restaurants and cafes are also available outside the U.S. Capitol Complex in the surrounding Capitol Hill neighborhood.

On the Senate side of the Capitol, visitors can enjoy several establishments with outdoor seating like Union Pub, Junction Bakery and Bistro, and Ebenzers, as well as numerous fast-casual and fast-food locations in Union Station.

The House side of the Capitol features many restaurants with outdoor seating along Pennsylvania Avenue, including Sweetgreen, Starbucks, Good Stuff Eatery, and the Hawk 'n' Dove.
